Happy New Year!

We've decided to start the new year with some exciting changes to our newsletter. We will now be sending out a bigger and better edition bi-monthly for you to enjoy.

We have had a busy festive season at Warratina Lavender Farm and the picking of our lavender is now completed but we still have lavenders in bloom for your enjoyment.

We will soon commence the stripping and cleaning of the lavender flowers currently hanging in the drying shed.

We look forward to seeing you soon,

Annemarie

TIPS & TRICKS

Drying lavender

Lavender heads are best cut when the first two flowers on the spike have opened. Watch them carefully as once the first few spikes are ready the remainder will follow within a few days.

Bunches of lavender are then tied together and hung upside down. Lavender must be dried in a darkened environment with plenty of dry air.

The lavender is dry when the stem breaks cleanly. Dried lavender is best used within 12 months as the colour can fade and the scent diminish.

'HANGED UP IN HOUSES IN THE HEATE OF SOMMER, DOTH VERY WELL ATTEMPTER THE AIRE, COOLE AND MAKE FRESH THE PLACE, TO THE DELIGHT AND COMFORT OF SUCH AS ARE THEREIN.'

- 'Lavender' The Herball, 1597

STEP BACK IN TIME...

In Tudor times, lavender seemed to have established a hot line to Cupid.

If a maiden wanted to know the identity of her true love, she would sip a brew of lavender.

Alpine girls tucked lavender under their lover's pillows, hoping to turn their thoughts to romance, and once married, newly-weds would put bunches of lavender under their mattress to ensure marital passion.
